In transmitting the report of the ser-geant to the Commissioners, Richard Syl-vester, the Superintendent of Police, took occasion to say that this was one of numerous complaints made by the same person about the locality named, and he stated that he was satisfied that the police have done what they could to abate the annoyance. But owing to the limited police force at his command Major Sylvester reminded the Commissioners that it is impossible for one or more officers to remain in the locality continuously, and the courts have held that the persons annoyed should be clied to appear in court to testify to the same.

Major Sylvester said that his own home y to the same. Major Sylvester said that his own bome

Major Sylvester said that his own bome is near the locality referred to by the complainant and that he is acquainted with the circumstances of the case. He informed the Commissioners that the police will do what they can to maintain peace and quiet in all sections of the city, but with a limited police force, and it being necessary to leave the windows open on account of the extreme warm weather, there must be more or less ground for complaint from time to time in the absence of the police.

The Commissioners have ordered that her husband struck her or that either he or she was profane. The stories of the defindants favorably impressed Judge Scott and he ordered the charges dismissed and the prizoners erleased.

Speed Electric Cars. As has been the case almost daily for the and Rout were in the Police Court this morning as complainants against a motorman charged with violating the police regulation governing the rate of speed at which electric cars may be operated. In this instance the defendant was James Conway, who is employed by the Washington Traction and Electric Company. It was alleged that he operated his car in Eckington at ninetten miles an hour. Conway denied the charge and presented a witness to corroborate him. He also sought to Seeks Divorce Because of Her Hus how through his attorneys, A. H. Selhausen and J. D. Mr. Sullivan, addressing Judge Scott in reference to the tachometers, said he thought it unfair to Cohway or any other thought it unfair to Conway or any other motorman to convict, on the strength of the testimony of the policemen when their evidence was based on the record of an instrument of which the motorman had no knowledge. He contended that if the motormen had an opportunity they could successfully combat the evidence egainst them and show by witnesses and by instruments that the cars were not operated at the rate of speed indicated by the tachometers used by the policemen. He added that in his opinion the motormen should be allowed to make a thorough test of the speed their cars generally made and were capable of making. Mr.

Mr. Sullivan thought the case against Conway should not be disposed of until he had an opportunity of bringing into court witnesses who would show that he did not violate the law. Furthermore, he said the late the law. Furthermore, he said the motorman should have an opportunity of testing the tachome or that had registered the rate of speed of his car, because, he claimed, there was a probability that a test would reveal that the instrument was not correct. In view of that fact Mr. Sullivan asked that the case against Conway he allowed to go over in order to afford.
